I'll see what I can find. FYI - Nico's letter to EPA in the documents you recently sent me state that his group is providing a defense to PG&E, among other entities, for the drum site. Therefore, there is a link associating PG&E to the Bay Area Drum site in the records.

Hello Mark:

I spoke with my investigator about PG&E. We do not have them as a generator party at Bay Area Drum. If you saw a document in the DTSC files, we are unaware of that document. However, if you are able to locate that document, we would be interested in reviewing it. We have issued a 104e to PG&E but that 104e does not relate to the BAD facility because we had no information which indicated that it was a customer at BAD. Our questions related to another facility in the vicinity of the slough where PG&E once operated.

Also, I wanted to let you know that we will be providing another disc of files you requested related to the BAD site to you this Friday.

Thank you,

Hi Thanne,

Thank you for taking my call. As I mentioned, I recall a letter in the DTSC Bay Area Drum Site files that was from PG&E to DTSC. In that letter, PG&E acknowledged sending some volume of drums to Bay Area Drum and that the drums originated from PG&E's Daly City plant (which may be referring to the Martin substation). Please let me know if you have sent any 104e requests to PG&E and, if so, whether or not I may obtain copies of the response(s). Thank you.

All the best,
Mark
